SHOPPING AS AN ART. it Is Better to Be a Season Too Early

Than a Week Too Late.

Before the art of shopping can be mastered certain principles must be thoroughly understood, and to the lack of this understanding may be traced the fact that so few women really know how to shop well. The great majority of women who shop are on an endless quest for six things, when they have money enough for only five, and it is one of the problems for the future to settle whether this fact is responsible for the feminine craze for bargains. However, that may be the careful shopper is the one who adopts for her motto "It is better to be an hour or a season too early than a week too late." Having made that principle a part of herself, she never passes a shop without having her eyes on the alert and she never glances at advertisements with her attention on something clse. Let us suppose she wants a $50 wrap and she lacks $10 to make up the price. She does not fret and fuss, nor commiserate herself, nor make an effort to get it at a reduction. She simply waits. It is true she feels a bit shabby in her last year's cape or coat as the holidays come along, but still she waits, possessing her soul in patience, and finally on a frosty January day she sees the notice that announces "great reductions in furs, etc." Then she smiles a placid smile. She tucks her $40 in her purse and sallies forth, serene as a summer morning, and at nightfall there is in her possession the $50 wrap and her work is done.

Each month in the year offers some things at reduced prices and which can be quietly and comfortably bought without coming within speaking distance of a hargain counter, and it is these reductions for which the careful shopper plans. She usually buys her flannels in the early spring and her cotton goods in the autumn, and she picks up odds and ends for the house "whene'er she takes her walks abroad." But if you try to lure her into buying "bargains" she will refuse with a smiling scorn which seems to envelop you in pity and says, "My dear, I never buy bargains. I know better." Than a Week Too Late.

SCRAMBLE FOR BRIDAL FAVORS. An Ancient and Curious German Wedding Custom. In the February Ladies' Home Journal

In the February Ladies' Home Journal Max von Binzer writes of his experience as "A Fage at the Berlin Court" upon the occasion of a double royal wedding, and of the preceding and succeeding festivities. Describing an ancient and curious custom, he writes: "Andnow (after the wedding dinner and ball) came the 'Fackeltanz.' Several of the highest officials entered the hall with flaming torches. A procession was formed with the bride in the midst. A number of complicated polonaise figures were per of complicated polonaise figures were hen executed, after which the line closed then executed, after which the line closed about the bride and groom and marched out as escort to the bridal chambers.

"As the doors of the bridal apartments closed upon the happy pair we found ourselves immediately next the entrance. We waited expectantly for the next feature, holding our advantageous position with some difficulty. In a few moments the doors flew open and half a thousand silken garters with the monograms embossed on the gold buckles were thrown out by the ladies of honor. Court efiquette was for the nonce forgotten—generals, courtiers, chamberlains and state ministers scrambled and fought with one another for these mements. But we pages, rest assured, got the lion's share. I have several of these souvenirs now, although many were given away by me that night to beseething dignitaries."

To Preserve Flowers.

Few persons are aware that flowers will keep fresh much longer if the stems are set in a dish of sand. Put the flowers into a vase as usual, then carefully slig into the vase by means of a funnel sufficient sand to fill it nearly to the top, shaking it so that the sand will settle down among the stems. Gradually add water until it stands a very little above the top of the sand, and replenish the water as often as needed.

That Grease Spot.

To remove a grease spot from woolen or silk thoroughly saturate the place with turpentine, and place a soft blotting paper beneath and another on top of the spot, and press very hard. The fat is dissolved, then absorbed by the paper and entirely removed from the cloth.

Stewed Kidneys.

Cut six mutton kidneys lengthwise in half, remove the white center part and cut the kidneys into slices. Season them with one even teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter teaspoonful of pepper and mix the seasoning and kidneys well together. Melt one ounce of butter in a saucepan, add one tablespoonful of fine chopped onion, cook three minutes, without browning. Then add the kidneys; cook three minutes, add four teaspoonfuls of sherry wine and cook again three minutes. Sprinkle over half a teaspoonful of flour, stir for a few minutes, add one gill of boiling water, with a little beef extract and one tablespoonful of lemon juice. Toss for a few minutes over the fire and serve with croutons. If the wine is objected to it may be omitted. Cut six mutton kidneys lengthwise in
